ATHEISM IN ALL AGES

The following interesting summary of a sermon delivered by Rev S B Rossiter at the North Presbyterian Church N Y is from the Tribune:

Atheism in one of its forms is nearly as old as sin. The only book that pretends to tell us of the very earliest condition of man reveals to us a happy state and condition in which God was worshiped and loved. The same book tells us of the apostasy of man which was also the birth of the subsequent doubt and denial of God's existence which the world has since known. In Genesis we read that God looked down upon men and beheld them as all gone out of the way. In David's time there were those who found it in their hearts to deny the existence of a Jehovah. Among the schools of philosophy atheists had its schools and its votaries and its teachers. One would think that in the presence of Christ it would shrink back and hide its head in its native darkness. But Christianity in all its career has fought against this antagonist. There have been schools of it right since the Savior's time whose teachings have been anything but the word of God. It had its carnival in France when her wisest and wittiest men gloried in their atheism and when in the murky days of the Revolution it wrote on the arches of the cemeteries "There is no God. Death is an eternal sleep." In this the 74th year of the 19th century it has its staunch adherents, men who openly and publicly proclaim their want of faith, men who while they do not deny yet do not affirm and teach doctrines the logical outcome of which some good men believe leads one to the doubt if not to the denial of Divine existence. If its antiquity is any proof of truth atheism has the argument of long life in its favor. But it surely in growing older becomes more blameworthy. Atheism lives on in the perversity and depravity of man from age to age, and in spite of glowing light lurks among the shadows and in the face of a noonday illumination steadfastly closes its eyes. Then atheism has much to answer for and the atheist of our day must bear the weight of the world's reproaches.

There are two forms of atheism that trouble us at this day, viz: Atheism in belief and atheism in practice. One form of atheism is the denial of the existence of God. This is a bare, bold atheism, the very lands end of skepticism, iniquity of perverseness. It is not an easy faith as one might think. It is not native to the mind, neither is it so pertinent a suggestion of science that students of nature are led to it. Though its votaries have appeared in all ages, yet their number has been small. Though it has its advocates to-day yet its numbers are few and their arguments do not convince even the sinful race of men.

The difficulties in the way of atheism are these: It is difficult to believe in a negative. Logicians tell us that it is impossible to prove a negative. So we cannot prove that God is not, for that involves the proof of a negative. Men attempt to demonstrate that we have no need of God. As soon as men can build up this great system of nature and call for no intervention of an intelligent conscious being it will be time for us all to forsake the Christian faith and follow to the eternal deep of which the French infidels dream. You cannot believe what you cannot prove is what is inconsistent with highest reason. That there is no God is impossible and the difficulty which lies in the laws of thought will be forever in the way of atheism. It is difficult to deny the existence of God because it is opinion that runs athwart all the laws of being. It is the nature of man to get hungry, and no conviction of man that there is no such appetite as hunger will stay the cravings of his stomach. Men have attempted to demonstrate that there is no reality in things we see, that they may be of other form and color than it appears to us but nevertheless in a supreme confidence that the laws of sight and feeling interpret to us rightly the shape and standing of things we lay brick to brick and clothe with wood and use mortar as it presents itself to our eyes and we have never yet been deceived. In fact the laws of being under which we live if obeyed lead on to happiness and if disobeyed lead on to pain. Would to God that the era of creed making were past and the perfect creed hung before men recognized by the universal reason and adopted by the universal consciousness that atheism or belief would have no peg on which to hang a denial. Would to God that the age of sin would pass and men's hearts would turn to the God their tongues had already professed. A perfect creed and a perfect life meet and blend in Christianity. "I am the truth and I am the life."

HAGER ON INTER-STATE COMMERCE

From the S F Bulletin

Senator Hager's speech on the power of Congress to regulate inter-State commerce delivered in the Senate on the 9th of June presented the problem in a somewhat new light. There is no question about the directness of the constitutional provision. It would have been impossible to confer a power in more unequivocal language. But some people seem to think that while such a function is proper enough for Congress there is no very intelligible way of exercising it. The idea of reaching out a hand in the direction of the railroads is regarded with a feeling somewhat akin to horror in the circles in which William M Evarts and Judge Curtis are the chief luminaries. Railroads are only public highways when they want to exercise the power of eminent domain, or to get subsidies or grants of lands. But the moment there is a movement toward regulating them or in any way bringing them into subjection to the law then they are private property of the most absolute kind. The profane crowd is almost hysterically bid [illegible] away. Not here shall people or Government exercise the slightest control. More private a hundred times than the money locked up in a banker's safe are the railroads when Congress or Legislature only begin to adjust their spectacles for the purpose of examining into them. It is not very easy to refute the deduction at which Senator Hager arrived in this matter. He said:

I do not say, for I am not sufficiently conversant with the facts whether or no the railroad charges from the Pacific westward are in excess of other roads. But it must be remembered the railroads (the Central and Union Pacific) were substantially built by the munificence of the people and not by private capital and yet the people have no control over them or property interest in them and cannot avail themselves of them on account of cost for the transportation of their products and that which they consume. The people of the valley of the Mississippi cannot ship grain to the port of San Francisco thence to be shipped to China or Japan no matter what the demand might be at the present rate of transportation. For that matter neither can they send by rail to New York to be shipped to Europe so as to compete with Russia. Unless some more advantageous carrying facilities some cheaper mode of transportation be devised for delivering our surplus products at our sea ports Russia will soon be underselling us not only in foreign markets but even in New York and Boston. To prevent such a calamity is there no government relief? Are we entirely dependent upon the magnanimity of private enterprise? Then private enterprise, not the Congress, regulates commerce among the States.

Private enterprise drawing all its financial strength from public donations—a private enterprise which ought to be public—is at this moment regulating the commerce between both sides of the continent and not the General Government. But while taking the ground that the General Government had the power to control this whole matter the Senator was careful not to commit himself to any line of policy which might involve more subsidies under the system which has already been productive of so much evil. Mr Hager's illustration of the Suez Canal was quite apposite. He said:

Take the case of the Suez Canal. It has been built by private individuals. The governments of Europe ascertaining that they were charging beyond what would be a fair recompense, had a sort of international congress, in which they determined that the rates should be reduced, but the owners of the canal [illegible]. Now it will not be denied that the canal is their private property. The sovereign power, the Sultan and the Khedive was applied to, and what was the result? [illegible] that the charges should be reduced. There was a sovereign power there that was competent to bring about the remedy that was required; otherwise commerce might have been driven from the canal. It is of such importance to control it. Before Vasco da Gama discovered the passage around the Cape of Good Hope the commerce of Asia enriched all the cities upon the Mediterranean. Alexandria, Venice, Genoa were so enriched and made magnificent by that commerce over land. Commerce it was. Trieste and Marseilles are now sustained [illegible] so entirely by that commerce.

SOME UNADJUSTED CLAIMS

[From the P C Advocate.]

The Geneva Award bill has been signed by the President and a Commission appointed to adjudicate and distribute the funds. The claimants are American citizens who lost property during the rebellion by Anglo-rebel-[illegible] war vessels. These losses form the basis of damages claimed by the United States of the British Government and for the settlement of which the Geneva Arbitration was raised. That Arbitration awarded the United States $15 500 000 in gold as indemnity in full for all such damage and that amount is now in the United States Treasury held for the benefit of those who lost property by English sympathy with the Southern Confederacy. We congratulate the numerous claimants of this fund on the bright prospect they now have of speedy realization of their cherished hopes and just claims.

Still there is many a slip between the cup and the lip, and it will be well for all these claimants to recall the history of the old French Spoliation Claims lest the cup of joy be dashed to pieces when they least expect it. Whether final success be theirs or not the statements which we here give will do no harm.

Since the Presidency of General Jackson—now about forty years—the United States Government has held in its Treasury five million dollars paid to it by France, under a treaty made by Jackson, for damages to our commerce in the wars of Napoleon I, but not one dollar of which has ever been paid to them for which that sum was delivered to our Government. Congress did nothing for years to do justice. Before the sum was even paid over Congress appointed a commission to adjudicate the claims, allowing them three years with an ample salary for their work of justice. The claims of the French court cases were docketed for hearing, and some were actually investigated and adjusted. But in the midst of this prospect news came that the French Chamber of Deputies had failed and refused to provide for payment of the indemnity as stipulated by treaty. The Commission was dissolved, and although the French Government did shortly after pay in the sum of five million dollars, the Commission for its distribution has never been revived and not a cent has ever gone to the rightful claimants of that fund. In the mean time the evidences of claims are dimming and disappearing—the original claimants are dying off and soon the possession of this five million dollars by the United States Government will be matured into legal title by the absence of all adverse claimants.

We know a dozen or more families heirs of original claimants, scattered from Wilmington Delaware, to this city of Portland Oregon whose struggles and sufferings for support and education would have been immensely less if twenty-five or thirty years ago Government had paid their just due. Theirs has been a painful experience in this matter of adjusting claims. Their impatience however has long since departed. Chastened by repeated alternations of hope and disappointment they have become patient and forbearing like those who though quick to resent wrongs from strangers are uncomplaining and submissive under impositions from their friends. And as time and history unfold the manner in which Congress is moved to action by rings and lobbies and money where it will do the most good, they smile at their former verdant credulity in the probity of Government where only a feeble few of its own citizens are the creditors. Possessing neither the number, the money nor depravity necessary to besiege successfully that Honorable body they despair of ever receiving redress from the Government. But all this time the Government holds on to the five million dollars with the coolness and complacency of a legal guardian to the profitable estate of a helpless ward and looks at the scene of wronged and suffering claimants through the successive generations as serenely and patiently as if a thousand years were as one day.

With such an experience in Oregon claimants of French spoliation funds sends to the Eastern ardent expectants of the Geneva award greeting. Keep cool brethren. Your day is at hand, and our sincere wish is that no untoward circumstance may convert it into a Government day of a thousand years during which these claims of yours shall be handed down like the French Spoliation Claims for the entertainment of posterity through successive generations ad infinitum.

CHANGE IN THE DEPARTMENT OF THE COLUMBIA

WASHINGTON July 6, 1874

General Howard is assigned to command the Department of the Columbia in place of General Jeff C Davis. The order relieving General Davis is not yet issued and it is not stated what point he will be ordered to. The following is the order issued:

WAR DEPARTMENT ADJUTANT'S OFFICE
July 3 1874

General Order No 76—By direction of the President Brigadier General O O Howard is assigned to command the Department of the Columbia, and will proceed to headquarters at Portland and with as little delay as practicable. By order of the Secretary of War

THOMAS M VINCENT
Assistant Adjutant-General

DEATH OF A FAMOUS AMERICAN.—NEW YORK July 1—Henry Grinnell whose death took place at his residence in this city yesterday at the age of 75 years was for many years at the head of the house of Grinnell Minturn & Co. He was a well known citizen but will be chiefly remembered for the munificence which he exhibited by fitting out two vessels and placing them under the charge of an officer of the United States Navy to make search for the lost Sir John Franklin in the Arctic regions.

SENTENCE OF GENERAL McCOOK'S MURDERER—Yankton Dakota July 1—Chief-Justice Shannon this afternoon overruled the motion for a new trial in the Wintermute case and sentenced the defendant to ten years imprisonment in the Iowa State penitentiary at Fort Madison. Defendant's counsel indicated their purpose to submit the case to the Supreme Court of the Territory at its next session which convenes here next week.

ADMIRAL POLO NOT RECALLED.—Our Government has no official information that Admiral Polo has been recalled. He will endeavor while there to be placed on active duty in the Spanish Navy, preferring to be relieved from the labors which are distasteful to him.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL AD INTERIM.—Washington July 1—Postmaster General Creswell has turned over the Postoffice Department to J W Marshall who has been commissioned Postmaster General to act until the arrival of Mr Jewell.

A Montana paper says: Deer Lodge, Missoula and Walla Walla all have young Brass Bands this spring. The Columbia river is coming up. "Hail Columbia!" If it

OREGON

Mumps still interfere with the little folks' enjoyment in Albany.

The number of people at Albany on the Fourth was estimated to be 6 000.

Not a house for rent is vacant in Albany. The town was never more prosperous than now.

A number of the Salem folks have gone to the seaside and mountains and more will go.

Seven hundred wagons and buggies were counted at the celebration at Albany on the Fourth.

A new warehouse 60x40 feet with sheds at either end is to be erected at Marion Station immediately.

Rev Mr Summers of the Episcopal Church will hold services at Gaston station on the 12th inst (to-morrow).

Columbia Conference of M E Church South will begin at the camp ground near Tangent on the 1st Saturday of this month.

The first mail over the Forest Grove and Astoria route arrived at the former place last Monday. It brought but one letter.

The Yamhill Reporter wants a State Board of School Directors constituted to go around and see that the school houses are properly ventilated.

Mr McDonald sold his farm near McMinnville the other day for $8 900. The farm, which contains 320 acres, was purchased by Mr Redman of this city.

Dr D M Jones has been elected to fill the chair of Materia Medica and Therapeutics in the Medical Department of Willamette University for the ensuing year.

A party of Salem Nimrods will start for the mountains next week armed to the teeth on slaughter bent. Any kind of game is acceptable from a grouse to an elephant.

Miss Minnie Allison fell in the raging Wallamet at Albany the other day but her companion Miss Lizzie Williams who is a good swimmer plunged in and bravely rescued her.

There will be a camp meeting held one mile and a quarter above Shedd on the opposite side of the river from the M E Camp ground, commencing on Thursday before the third Sabbath in this month.

Dave Thompson while riding in his buggy on Second street ran over Alva Arnold son of Mr A N Arnold of Albany about nine years old, the buggy wheel striking him in the forehead and cutting a deep gash.

Brownsville is flourishing. Property is increasing in valuation and scarcely an empty house in town. A year ago there were fifty unoccupied houses. This can be mainly attributed to the starting up of the Woolen Factory.

The Yamhill Reporter says: Farms are in great demand either to rent or buy. There is more search for land this year than has ever been known in our county before. This is a favorable omen showing that the merits of our county are recognized and appreciated.

Messrs Kay, Croft & Co, of the Eagle Woolen Mills at Brownsville have again resumed work with about twenty five operatives. Ten looms are running, and as fine fabrics as were ever manufactured in Oregon are being turned out in immense quantities. This is an important enterprise to Brownsville as well as to Linn county and we are glad it is succeeding so well.

At a meeting held at The Dalles last week the Board of Directors of the Portland Dalles and Sandy Wagon Road Company, let the contract for the grading and macadamizing of this road between the Upper and Middle Cascades two and three quarter miles to O Humason Esq for the sum of $4 600 in scrip. This section of the road is perhaps the most difficult to overcome and therefore the most expensive.

Rev T Walker than whom no man in Oregon is better known or more highly respected and who has long been pastor of the Congregational Society at Forest Grove preached his farewell sermon to the people there last Sunday. This is one of our earliest pioneer preachers of Oregon, retired from active labor. Earnest and faithful has he been in preaching the glad tidings to men and now he can look back over his life and feel that it has been spent in the service of mankind in the noblest vocation on earth. Mr Walker came to this coast in '37 or '38 and labored with Dr Whitman for the conversion of the Indians in Eastern Oregon. After the Whitman massacre he moved his family to this valley and has devoted his energies up to this time to preaching.

Mart Brown says: "A young Albany couple were out on a door step on Gospel Ridge late last Sunday night looking at the comet now visible in the northern heavens. At least it was evident the young lady wanted to see the comet, because she was overheard to tell the young gent to keep his face out of the way, so she could see the comet." Then there was a noise like the sudden drawing of a horse's hoof out of the stiff mud and then—and then—well the old man thrust his head out at the front door of that house and the young astronomers turned their backs to each other, and began counting the stars aloud with great vehemence. The old man told them that the spheroidal mass which they had been so diligently contemplating in the ethereal dome scarcely demanded any more of their united attention that evening and the young man would very much oblige him by peregrinating in the direction of his own local habitation at that immediate period of time or he would enable him to see stars with more multitudinosity. The young man didn't further wait upon the order of going but got at once.

A proper observance of the Fourth was had at the Reservation on the Puyallup. Some 200 whites and nearly 1 000 Indians of all ages assembled there. The usual exercises of the day were gone through with with the addition of having the Declaration of Independence oration etc translated into Indian and jargon.

The fourth annual regatta of the Club will take place on the 15th inst at Oysterville.

Some five hundred yards of the trestle work and much grading are about completed in connection with the Seattle coal mine work and the new barge is fast assuming proportions under charge of Mr Hammond. Chutes and steamers are repaired, the mines cleared out and readjusted and soon the steam whistle will be heard heralding enlarged business.

SATURDAY MORNING JULY 11 1874

BEGIN NOW

Everybody talked reform before the late election. The Independents demanded reforms such as would make State and county administration more efficient and less expensive. They appealed to the people against both the old parties, and in spite of the prestige of party association and the advantages of solid organization, the old parties were defeated in many of the counties. The Independents elected more members to the Legislature than any other party. They have not a majority. Neither has any other organization.

But the Independents did not stand alone in the demand for reform. The party managers all round saw early that the dissatisfaction of the people was such as could not be allayed by ordinary means. They therefore resolved upon extraordinary ones. They went into the campaign with Reform and Retrenchment emblazoned on their banners. They told the people plainly that the existing state of things, albeit themselves had brought that state of things about, was intolerable, and that in common with the masses who had theretofore acted with them they had got their eyes open to the necessity of reform, and that they were bound to see to it that all that the people demanded of the Legislature should be performed. Those of them who were elected were elected upon these pledges. So that the entire Legislature, excepting those Senators who hold over from the election of 1872, has been chosen upon the issue of retrenchment and reform. If before and after election are not things even more widely different than has been heretofore supposed, we shall certainly witness in the approaching session of the Legislature some vigorous efforts to cut down the expenses of the government, and to make such other reforms as the occasion clearly demands.

Specifically, what is to be done? It is far easier to talk generally of retrenchment and reform than to inaugurate practical measures in that direction. A general curtailing of expenses and a consequent reduction of taxation would be very acceptable indeed to people of all parties, but where is the work to be commenced? Everywhere. In the keeping of the insane it should be curtailed to the tune of thousands annually. In the public printing it should be cut off to the tune of many thousands more. In the Commissions for public buildings it should be lopped off. The whole system of squandering public property on private roads should at once and forever cease. The various devices by which the administrative officers of the State Government have been enabled to draw thousands of dollars more than their Constitutional salaries, should be wiped off the statute book. The expenses of county governments, which were so thoroughly shown up during the campaign, can be so reduced that the result will be at once felt in lighter taxation. These are the general matters. There may be doubtless there are, other places where the scalpel could be employed to advantage. The details of procedure are for the legislators to attend to. That is their business. They will fail to do their duty and to deserve the approval of their constituents, if they fail to find and apply the remedy to these plain and plainly curable evils. And they will surely fail in this last respect, unless they collect and study the facts bearing on the case in detail before they go to Salem. Hasty, slipshod legislation cannot but be faulty, and is always liable to prove wholly futile. Careful preparation and diligent attention to details have made more men great than genius has. These are indispensable in the legislator. Let our reform legislators bear this in mind. If they forget it, they will forget the secret upon which alone success depends.

DIVIDENDS

How refreshing it is to pick up an Eastern paper and read that notwithstanding the stringency of financial matters, and the stagnancy of many important industries, but few of the railway companies have defaulted on their interest accounts, while many have continued to declare their regular dividends on stock. What is stock? An examination into the legal nature of a corporation, it should seem, ought to furnish an answer to the question, but it will not. The law books tell us that stock is the capital of the corporation, and each man's stock is the share he is entitled to have in all the property of the concern, by reason of the proportion he has paid into its treasury. A subscription to the stock of a corporation is therefore an agreement to pay so much money into the common fund in consideration of such a proportion of its property as the money so paid bears to the whole fund. Dividends are consequently nothing more nor less than the net earnings of the money thus contributed to the enterprise in which the corporation is engaged. This is the legal view of the case, but the law books are wrong so far as relates to railway corporations. In most of these stock is a fiction for all purposes except for dividends. The subscriber pays nothing. He subscribes, and that is all he does till the dividends are declared, and then he draws money for his stock as if it had cost him money. The roads are built on borrowed money, and the bonds upon which interest is paid are for this money. A road that can be built with reasonable profit for $6,000,000 is indebted say $8,000,000 on bonds. It borrowed the extra $2,000,000 in order that construction contracts might be let to those inside its inevitable ring on suitable terms. But the same road has a nominal stock of $10,000,000 not a cent of which has ever been paid in. This stock represents nothing, but it must draw its dividends. The interest on the $8,000,000 must likewise be paid. Here there are $8,000,000 of bonds, plus $10,000,000 of stock, upon which interest must be paid. A road that cost $6,000,000 is paying interest on $18,000,000, of which $2,000,000 are fraudulent and $10,000,000 are simply bogus. Do you see where the [illegible] begin?

A NEW SUMMER RESORT

The Chicago Tribune asserts that Chicago is better adapted to the purposes of a summer resort than any of the places usually chosen for that purpose, excepting neither those on the sea beach nor those in the mountains. It claims that Long Branch and Saratoga are miserably hot and uncomfortable in comparison with Chicago, and that the various summering places in the mountains of Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, Vermont and New Hampshire, are all less healthful and less enjoyable than Chicago. This city is indeed declared to approach nearer to an Elysium summer than any other part of the continent. And then read this:

The sojourner in Chicago, if his object be to bathe in fresh air, to have an abundant supply of pure water, comfortable spacious lodgings, and a table supplied with all the varieties of food that make up a seasonable entertainment, can find no place where he can improve his condition. We are in the heart of the country and in direct communication with all its markets. The soft crabs of the sea coast, the fruits and vegetables of the tropics, the trout and other fish of the North, the beef of the plains, the mutton of the mountains, the wines of California, Ohio and Missouri and of Europe—everything that can tempt the appetite or gratify the most fastidious taste finds its way to Chicago. Within twelve hours ride of some of the best fruit gardens of the country, there is never a scarcity of any variety of fruit at any season. The world is tributary to the market of Chicago. With pure air and an abundance of pure water, with lake and forest, plains and river all at our door, we unite all the enjoyments of country life with metropolitan abundance, luxury and comforts. The summer visitor to this city has all the purity of air that he vainly seeks in the rural solitude, and this with all the comforts and elegancies of a metropolitan city.

It may be even as presented in this enthusiastic argument, but we should wish to try about a hundred places that the Tribune does not mention before conceding to Chicago the preference over all other points in the universe as a watering place. Passing by our own beautiful little city, which we should be disposed to enter on the list if there were no competitor but Chicago, we beg leave to refer the question to the citizens of Victoria, Astoria, and if they cannot reach a decision we suggest that they call in those of Oakland, California. Chicago is a nice village, but when it wishes to set itself up for a summer resort, it would act prudently not to extend its comparisons to the Pacific coast.

A WARNING TO THE PRESIDENT

The above is the significant heading which the Cincinnati Gazette, one of the ablest Republican papers in the Union, gives to an editorial on the subject of the nomination of Shepherd by the President and his rejection by the Senate. After general remarks commendatory of the firmness of the Senate as manifested in its refusal to confirm Shepherd, the Gazette proceeds:

The nomination was, whether intended or not, in open defiance of public sentiment, and we are entirely within the bounds of truth in saying that the Senate in rejecting it fairly represented nineteen twentieths of the people of the United States.

What the President knows of Shepherd we do not pretend to say, but what the people think of that person we need not stop to detail. Shepherd's nomination in the first place to the Governorship of the District shocked the public conscience. It was an act that the political friends of the President did not dare to defend before the people. It was then suspected that the District Government was outrageously corrupt, and it was known that Shepherd was the soul and brain of that Government. It being no part of the business of the President of the United States to appoint men to office for the purpose of vindicating them, the appointment under the circumstances was, to say the least, unwise. There were serious charges pending against Shepherd. An investigation of these at least, should have preceded his appointment, but he was appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate without question. The Senate subsequently opposed an investigation, but it was forced by the very decided action of the House, backed by an overwhelming public sentiment, to join in an investigation. The inquiry thus authorized was fairly conducted by a committee composed of Republicans and Democrats, and the report, which condemned the management of the affairs of the District, of which Shepherd, as we have said, was the soul and brains, as recklessly and corrupt, was unanimous. Upon this report, and not upon common rumor or previous charges, the country made up its verdict, and that too was very nearly unanimous. To the credit of the press it is to be said that outside of Washington City, public opinion upon the subject was fairly represented.

It was the opinion in all quarters of the investigation, for reasons already indicated, that the President should have dropped Shepherd. After the investigation there were few people that could for one moment suppose his appointment to any position possible. The friends of the President were even grieved to learn that he permitted Shepherd to accompany him to Cape May. This incident is mentioned to show how deep and widespread was the conviction on the subject. The general indignation caused by the nomination sent into the Senate on Tuesday may therefore be imagined. It was so unexpected that no one seemed capable of explaining it. The President evidently did not understand, or did not care for public sentiment. The most charitable conclusion was that he suffered himself to be surrounded by men who determined that upon this subject he should not be reached by a health inspiring breeze from the public. This is our conclusion, and the President in thus permitting himself to be misled, is deserving of advice given in the spirit of truth and soberness rather than in that of unconditional censure. His sympathies are naturally with the people. He was sincere when in his inaugural address he declared he would have no policy to enforce against the will of the people. The general course of his administration has been consistent with this declaration. Lately, however, there have been alarming symptoms of a departure from this safe policy, and we attribute it to an atmosphere created by sycophants or designing knaves for the purpose of deceiving him and helping themselves. This idea must have occurred to the President on Tuesday evening. When informed that only six Senators voted for Shepherd's confirmation, and when he heard the names of those six, he must have asked himself, Who or where are my friends? The best friends of the President are those Republican Senators who stood up like men and denounced the nomination and voted with an emphasis against it. The thirty-six Senators who voted nay uttered the voice of the people. That was a warning voice too, and we feel confident that we represent the great mass of the people of the United States in saying that the President, in upholding or seeming to uphold such men as Shepherd, is running upon rocks that if not avoided will destroy his reputation. The Senate has saved the country from the Shepherd disgrace, but it cannot save the President unless the President decides not to take another step toward the breakers which even now threaten his destruction.

The County Commissioners have begun well. They have discharged J. S. [illegible] from the position of county physician and reduced the salary to $600. [illegible] appointment was a job. A better man and one who held a high position as a physician was discharged to make room for him, and the salary was then increased for his special benefit. This was all done in pursuance of a contract between him and Hippler, he performing certain disreputable political services for Hippler as the consideration. The people footed the bill. So they go. [illegible] by [illegible] these odorous places fall, and with every one [illegible] for the expenses to the taxpayers of running the county [illegible].

AN ACT FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF INDEPENDENT JOURNALISM

When in the summer of 1873 the New York Sun's exposure of the ring which had for three years been plundering the taxpayers of the District of Columbia and the National Government arrested the attention of the country, Mr. A. R. Shepherd, one of the parties most affected by the charges, procured the arrest of Mr. Dana, editor of the Sun, on a warrant ordering him to appear before the Police Court of Washington City, and there make answer to a charge of libel. Previously, Congress had enacted a law giving this Police Court jurisdiction in libel and slander cases. The attempt to drag a publisher from New York City to Washington for an alleged offense committed in the former city, excited the press in every part of the country. Everywhere it was regarded as a direct and most malicious attack on the freedom of the press. Mr. Dana took the case into the United States Court on a writ of habeas corpus. It was there held by Judge Blatchford, presiding, that under the law already cited the Police Court of Washington City had no jurisdiction, first because it was not authorized to have jury trials, and secondly because the Constitution of the United States guarantees to the defendant in all criminal prosecutions the right of trial by jury. We quote the Article upon which Judge Blatchford's opinion was based:

Art. VI. In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

So the attempt failed. Subsequently, in the case of Buell, who was sued for libel by Senator Chandler because he wrote the St. Louis Republican that the latter was so drunk on one occasion that he was removed from the floor of the Senate to a cloak chamber, the opinion of Judge Blatchford was reaffirmed by a District Court.

But Shepherd and men of his ilk were not to be put off with one repulse. They procured the passage of the following law, at the last session of Congress:

An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Criminal Court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes. Be it enacted, etc. That the Criminal Court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of all crimes and misdemeanors committed in said District not lawfully liable in any other court, and they are required by law to be prosecuted by indictment or information.

Sec. 2. That the provisions of the thirty-third section of the Judiciary act of 1789 shall apply to courts created by act of Congress in the District of Columbia.

From Washington correspondence to the N. Y. Tribune of June 27th we learn that the first section of this innocent looking bill transfers cases like Dana's from the Police Court to the District Criminal Court, in which trial by jury is to be had. Section 2 confers upon the District Criminal Court all the powers of a Federal Court in similar cases. Here is the history of the bill as given by the Tribune correspondent:

May 27th—Reported by Poland from the Judiciary Committee and passed by the House. Speer of Pennsylvania asked if it affected the Buell libel suit, and Poland replied that it only referred to future cases. The same day it was referred to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. June 12th—Senator Edmunds reported the bill with amendments. June 16th—Senator Frelinghuysen, just as the Senate was going into Executive session, called up the bill. He said that it had been examined carefully by the Judiciary Committee, and that it was very necessary that it should pass. The bill and amendments were agreed to without debate. June 20th—Senate amendments agreed to by the House. June 22d—Signed by the President.

It will be observed that the Article of the Constitution above quoted provides that the accused shall be entitled to trial by a jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed. It is argued by the framers and advocates of the new law that a crime like that alleged against Mr. Dana is "committed in the District of Columbia, because the alleged libelous publication is circulated there." It is held by the opponents of the law that the crime is committed in the State where the alleged libel is published. The correspondent pointedly says: "If this claim holds good, then an editor or publisher in San Francisco can be indicted for libel in the District of Columbia Criminal Court and may be arrested and brought here for trial."

Such is the law under which this second attempt of the District Ring upon Mr. Dana is made. Whatever may be the faults of the gentleman in other cases (and we wish to have it understood that we are no admirers of the Sun style of journalism) the present attack upon him savors strongly of persecution. But Dana and the Sun are not the only parties interested. Honest independent journalism is really the objective point of attack. It is sought to make open fearless criticism of the people's servants dangerous. The law surrounds the newspaper publisher with embarrassments intended, as we believe, to restrain the free utterance of honest opinion. And thus it assails one of the bulwarks of popular liberty. It seeks to exert a kind of terrorism over the press, which is utterly at variance with the spirit of American institutions. Nor do we see how it can restrain that reckless journalism of which complaint is so often and so justly made. The laws as they stood were amply sufficient for the protection of all good men. A Congress that resorts to such stringent legislation as this must be in a bad way. The law should be repealed at the next session.

We transcribe from the Pacific Christian Advocate this morning an excellent article headed "Some Unadjusted Claims." The action of the Government in withholding so long the money which belongs to the class of persons mentioned is handled none too severely by the Advocate. If an individual had acted just as the Government has acted in these cases he would be universally condemned for it. But can a Government rightfully do in a purely business matter what it would be wrong for an individual to do?

DROWNED.—About 8 o'clock A. M. yesterday a fisherman named John Polworth was drowned at [illegible] by the capsizing of a small boat. At the time of the accident [illegible] was taking a boat load of fish over [illegible] when the craft upset [illegible] Deceased leaves a wife and five children.

Yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock a [illegible] years, fell off the wharf at St. Johns and was drowned before she could be rescued [illegible] after the sad accident the body was [illegible]

A JANITOR [illegible] Since the new Board of County Commissioners came into power [illegible] made for the appointment of a janitor at the Court House [illegible] to be under the control and direction of the Sheriff. However the salary offered is so extremely low that no man can be found [illegible] willing to perform the labor for the compensation. The Board has appropriated [illegible] $2 per month for the [illegible] of the Janitor.

TAKING THE CENSUS.—Prof. S. W. King [illegible] of this city, is at present engaged in taking the census of the juvenile population of Portland. This is for the purpose of basing the distribution of the school fund [illegible] next year. Last year the count [illegible] 3,768 children between the ages of [illegible] and 20 years. From present appearances [illegible] population [illegible] the present year will be considerably in advance of [illegible]

A CURRENT MOTION.—Before the present Board of Commissioners adjourned we learn that they [illegible] ask for sealed proposals for the furnishing of all necessary stationery to be used by the several officers of the county for the period of one year. This is thought to be a much more economical plan than under the former [illegible] competition will tend to reduce the prices and the county will secure the benefit of the difference.

SENT DOWN.—The O. S. N. Co. sent down the steamer Jo [illegible] McNear, Capt. CITY.

NOT APPROVED.—The announcement made yesterday in the daily papers of the city to the effect that the official bond of Mr Fred Harbaugh, the Treasurer elect was filed and approved, was premature. His bond has not been accepted yet The bond was presented in the County Court yesterday but did not meet the approval of the Board The bond was fixed at $50,000 in currency which was revoked and $50,000 in coin substituted by the Court. The persons whose names were annexed as sureties, instead of appearing in person before the Court to answer the usual questions touching their qualifications, had gone before the County Clerk and made affidavits as to the amounts of property possessed by them These were regarded as sufficient grounds by the Court for declining to approve Mr Harbaugh's bond.

NEW BROOMS.—"A new broom always sweeps clean" is the old adage and George Herrall knows that to be the case By the last steamer Mr Herrall received a large invoice of the Vallejo Socket Brooms from California. These brooms are formed upon a socket of thin iron with shoulder arms attached and they are at once the most substantial and handiest brooms that we have yet seen in the market. The handle which is slightly beveled at the lower end fits tightly into this socket and in case of accidental breakage or for any other cause, can be removed at pleasure

NO LICENSE PAID.—Yesterday was the last day allowed for taking out licenses for dealing in liquors, but up to a late hour in the afternoon not a single saloon keeper or dealer, either wholesale or retail had applied for the quarterly licenses now due to the Auditor and Clerk. This very tardy action is attributable to the recent ordinance passed by the Common Council raising the tariff of license It is more than probable that dealers in liquor will contest the validity of the ordinance, or petition the Council for its repeal. What course will be pursued remains to be seen

DROWNED.—About 8 o'clock A M yesterday a [illegible] man named John Polworth was drowned at Eagle Cliff by the capsizing of a small boat At the time of the accident Polworth was taking a boat load of fish over to Hume's establishment when the craft upset and resulted in his death, Deceased leaves a wife and five children

Yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock a Miss Balch, aged about 9 years fell off the wharf at St Johns, and was drowned before she could be rescued Soon after the sad accident the body was recovered

A JANITOR APPOINTED.—Since the new Board of County Commissioners came into power provisions have been made for the appointment of a Janitor at the Court House The person appointed is to be under the control and direction of the Sheriff However the salary offered is so extremely low that no man can be found who is willing to perform the labor for the compensation The Board has appropriated the sum of $25 per month for the monthly payment of the Janitor

TAKING THE CENSUS.—Prof S W King of the public schools of this city, is at present engaged in taking the census of the juvenile population of Portland This is for the purpose of basing the distribution of the several school funds for next year Last year the county was reported to have 3,768 children between the ages of 4 and 20 years From present appearances the juvenile population of the city the present year will be considerably in advance of that number

A CHEAPER METHOD.—Before the present Board of Commissioners adjourn we learn that they proposed to ask for sealed proposals for the furnishing of all necessary stationery to be used for the several offices of the county for the period of one year This is thought to be a much more economical plan than under the former regime, as competition will tend to reduce the prices, and the county will secure the benefit of the difference

SENT DOWN.—The O. S N Co. sent down the steamer Josie McNear, Capt Henry Kindred, this morning, to run among the fisheries between Eagle Cliff and Astoria to deliver salmon from the nets to the fisheries carry [illegible] from the fisheries to Astoria and [illegible] accommodate the local traffic about the fisheries and Astoria and relieve the regular boats of the delay heretofore necessary to these localities

BASE BALL.

The Eagles of Vancouver telegraph the Pioneers that they will not be able to play to day one reason assigned being that the grounds are unsuitable for a base ball game They are correct and we would suggest the East Portland grounds as the proper place for playing—at least while the water is down

Eastern game.—June 2[illegible] Athletic 14 Mutual 7 24th Athletic 18 Mutual [illegible] Boston 10 Chicago 2 [illegible] 25th—Philadelphia [illegible], Mutual 12 Boston 11 Hartford 13 [illegible]th—Boston 8 Chicago 7 27th—Athletic 16 Philadelphia 15 Mutual 7 Hartford [illegible] Boston 29 Chicago 6 29th—Chicago [illegible] Athletic [illegible]

Lovers of the national game will be treated to a scientific display to day Weeks of practice have made the Chapel nines of the OREGONIAN and Bulletin offices perfect masters of the situation and those anticipating a muffing game will be sadly disappointed We will go prepared to note down the double plays brilliant running catches line flys and extraordinary running of bases Owing to other engagements our local brass bands will be unable to furnish music on the occasion The boys will supply sufficient chin music for all purposes The mammoth oaks will afford abundance of shade and the ladies may find comfortable seats beneath Be promptly on hand at 2 P M The nines are eager for the fray East Portland grounds is the place

The Chicago Tribune tenders this bit of advice to the White Stockings of that city

"Isn't it about time the organization of young athletes known as the White Stocking Base Ball Club came home and rested from their labors? During their Eastern tour they have been beaten out of all semblance of human shape in almost every instance The Eastern clubs have not only defeated them but they have taken pains to rub in the defeats and they have piled up figures against them which remind one of the size of the public debt If their manager has any regard for the reputation of Chicago from a muscular point of view he will bring his athletes home at once and disorganize them or set them to playing during the remainder of the season with some of our school boy clubs Such playing as they have exhibited would be a discredit even to St Louis players and when it gets to be as bad as that it is about time to stop Come home and stay Go to brick making or sewer laying where there is no championship pending but don't play ball any more with professional clubs It is growing painfully monotonous"

When summer heat gets so intense as to create hydrophobia in human beings without the predisposing cause of a dog bite then there is cause for apprehension Such a case is reported in the East

No woman, however nervous she may be has a right to wake her husband from a sound sleep only to tell him on his inquiring the matter "Nothing only I wanted to know if you were awake"

AMUSEMENTS.

"Maude's Peril" a beautiful four act drama, drew out a fair audience last evening at Oro Fino Theater Throughout the play was superbly rendered, and drew forth much applause from an appreciative audience This afternoon a matinee will be given at 2 o'clock A splendid bill will be rendered this evening "The Daughter of the Regiment" concluding, with the farce of "Cool as a Cucumber" Secure your seats early, as there is certain to be a great rush,

[COMMUNICATED.]

REV. DR. JULIUS ECKMAN.

Rabbi Dr Julius Eckman formerly minister and teacher of the congregations "Beth Israel" and Ahavai Sholom of this city has according to late San Francisco dispatches sealed his earthly career on the 6th inst

About a year since Dr Eckman left his field of labor in this city with feelings of deep regret, and his many friends now mourn the sad fate which so soon thereafter called him hence

OBITUARY

Genesis Chap 49 Verse 22: Jacob spake Assemble ye children of Israel and hearken unto me "Joseph is a green twig, a green twig by a spring, from there thou becamest the shepherd of Israel The [illegible] shall rest upon Joseph's head and on the crown of the head of him that was separated from his brothers"

"Wail fir tree" for fallen is the cedar the mighty tree hath fallen

Hearken the noise of the wailing of the shepherds for wasted is their glory Israel's pride is destroyed

Yes he hath gone and now the flock are left without a shepherd but such is the destiny of man

We shall mourn for him as we would for a first born son mourn and shed bitter tears

Every Jewish family but in particular children whose friend and teacher he was should wear the insignia of mourning in fact all Israel should mourn But for [illegible] may it prove a spring of [illegible]

A mourning friend M M

FASHION NOTES.

The long traveling shawl is a Roman striped India shawl or else one of soft domestic wool in blocks of white with black brown or blue

Very dressy sashes to wear with summer dresses are of pale gros grain ribbon two inches wide in stripes alternating with Valenciennes insertion Black sashes have guipure insertions between

The linen polonaise still exists for traveling attire because it is too good a thing to be willingly let go It is made large enough for an overall to conceal a handsome suit and protect it from dust in which case it is called a duster

Debege has succeeded cashmere as the popular fabric for summer traveling dresses It is soft and pliable of serviceable and stylish color and withal inexpensive as it is from forty to fifty cents a yard and about twenty yards are required

The redingote is not popular for debege suits as the material has not body enough The hat worn with such a dress is black or brown chip turned up on one side or both and trimmed with grey or brown twilled silk or a single scarf with short natural ostrich feathers and some flowers of a becoming color

Large fans of silk painted by hand are prized above those with lace transparencies over silk Something unique in design is sought after in these paintings—such as groups of tall storks beside water in plain grasses serpents hanging from limbs of trees and any subject no matter if it is disagreeable, is preferred to the Watteau landscapes and bouquets with which fans were lately ornamented

Silk aprons are offered for sale in the furnishing houses but the query is when shall they be worn? as they are too fanciful for morning wear with wrappers and all other dresses are trimmed in apron fashion However they are made of pale blue or pink or black twilled silk a single breadth short with square corners trimmed across the bottom with a pleated flounce of white muslin edged with Valenciennes There are large pockets and a belt and strings of ribbon

The prettiest scarf worn with black summer suits and lace sacques is made of Valenciennes lace It is over a yard long and has a row of wide Valenciennes insertion in the middle with wider lace on each side of it This is worn tied closely around the throat with hanging loops and ends and it is intended for street use The black guipure and Spanish scarfs are still worn They are very long and are fastened around the neck by a dagger or arrow of jet or shell or else by a flower cluster

WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE

Cyrus Ferriston and his mother were all that remained of the family They lived together in a snug farmhouse in a district so rural that it hadn't so much as a name it had only a number—Township No 1 People below in the adjoining farming villages spoke of it and its neighbors as The Numbers It might have been supposed to be the outskirts of civilization—its frontier for its nearest neighbor was five miles away the only religious exercises were held in Deacon Crocket's kitchen, three miles further off while there were ten miles between them and the doctor Cyrus was an energetic fellow who farmed in summer and logged in the winter that is he usually took a contract to bring the drive of logs down from the woods therefore he had been in the habit of borrowing Farmer Hutton's daughter Jane to keep his mother company and help her about the house for a small consideration Sometimes too, Jane staid on through the summer or returned for the harvesting when it was heavy and at such times Cyrus always observed that his butter and cheese found a more ready market, that the house was more cheerful and better kept—for old Mrs Ferriston was one of the slack kind, that provisions went further and relished better But for all this he felt no inclination to marry Jane, as folks at Wheatfield had predicted when she first went up to The Numbers Jane was called plain and Cyrus had a prepossession that his wife should be rosy and dark-eyed, with the smile that conquers men Jane halted in her gait the least bit in the world—his wife should have the step of a panther She always dressed soberly, like a brown leaf as if she would like to melt into the landscape—his wife should carry her fascination into the knot of ribbon at her throat, or the slipper on her foot Therefore it was utterly out of the question if we put any faith in logic, that Jane should become the wife of Cyrus.

But, alas! as it often happens, she had not wintered and summered at The Numbers for naught When the neighbors had nectored her as she was about to leave home for the first season, and prophesied, "Well, Jane, I dare say it won't be long before you'll be changing your name to Ferriston,' Jane had laughed at the notion, and had reckoned that Cyrus hadn't enough schooling to please her, and had thought that she could never be reconciled to spending her days at The Numbers

'Folks as held their head as high as you miss, hev hed ter come ter it,' they answered her But when she became acquainted with Cyrus in his every day life, she found that he knew more than she had dreamed He had a little library of books on a swinging shelf that he had made with his own hands, and had carved with deers heads and oak leaves he could talk with her about the heroes of Plutarch and the empires of the Old World, about election and free-will and seemed to enjoy it Jane had a taste for those things, and so it happened that as she saw Cyrus in his daily comings and goings, stripped of disguises in his genial fireside humor, he grew in her favor unawares in short, in manly attributes his kindness and good temper, and his handsome face won her heart without an effort on either side. He had so grown into her affections that one day when she heard Deacon Smiley joking him about Agnes Price her prophetic soul stirred in her with a mighty throe Every thing seemed to revolve before her eyes—the churn-dasher the tins on the kitchen wall, and the andirons on the hearth she was obliged to sit down on her way to the dairy and recover herself, with a tray of butter in her hands.

'It is too heavy for you, said Cyrus coming to her relief, with his ready thoughtfulness and taking the tray himself

He'll make a good husband, Cy will" said the deacon while the young man's back was turned " She'll be a lucky gall that gits him, and, between us, I ain't noways partial to that there Aggy Price Highty tighty'—now, Jennie why didn't you set your cap for him and you right here at hand? "I would hev bin as easy as lyin'!"

Would it?" laughed Jane, out of the depth of her silent misery

Of course Jane should have left off loving Cyrus after this, but she didn't and naturally he was as blind as others of his sex, and never guessed what an ache it gave plain Jane Hutton when he dressed up in his Sunday best with the neck tie she had made him on his birthday and rode off to pay his court to Agnes Price five miles across the country, She was always awake when he let himself in at midnight, and went tip-toeing to his room and she lay wondering how it must seem to be loved by a man after your own heart Her life seemed to promise to be all November weather But though The Numbers were so isolated they had their merry makings There was a quilting at Mrs Deacon Crocket's, in Number Two or a husking at Farmer Dusenbury's in Wheatfield or a haying bee at Deacon Smiley's, with dancing in the barn, hung with lanterns, in the evening, and there were camp-meeting days, and now and then there was a wedding, and no distance was too far to travel, and Cyrus always harnessed old Dapple and took Jane along with him as Agnes would be going with her brothers, or sometimes, if the road led that way he would call for Miss Agnes, and Jane would sit on the back seat of the wagon and only guess what was going on before her in the twilight hugging her pain in loneliness of heart Nobody knew but Jane was just as happy as the others who danced chorus jigs and college hornpipes nobody ever would have known Sometimes there was a preacher on the circuit, who went about from one number to another holding meetings and Cyrus and his mother and Jane put on their best, and went the rounds too and Cyrus and Agnes helped at the singing and lingered after the benediction [illegible] week the preacher staid at Ferriston Farm [illegible] asked Jane to marry him, and though [illegible] Ferriston was sorry to part with her, yet she advised Jane to think of it seriously and went so far as to get Cyrus to talk with her about it This was the last straw that broke the camel's back Jane was sick in bed till the preacher left the Numbers

Dear sakes!' said Mrs. Ferriston, 'if it's going to keel Jane over like this every time she has a beau, the fewer the better Girls didn't use to take it to heart so

' On the whole ' remarked Cyrus, I'm glad she didn't take to him It's selfish but how could we get on without her just yet?

I suppose you'll be bringin' a wife home one of these days. It's a pity you couldn't hev takin' a likin' to Jane yourself and she right handy in the house, and knowin all your ins and outs, and no fault to find '

Choose the one that you love best,
Suit yourself you'll suit the rest'

sang Cyrus Jane wouldn't have me either '

That's for you to say" returned his mother, thinking that the girl was unborn who would refuse her Cyrus

Well, at one time they had Miss Agnes Price up at Number One to make a visit and let her see how the land lay, and at first words weren't big enough to express her satisfaction But she used to laugh at Jane's old-fashioned way of dressing her hair and cutting her gown and when Jane and Cyrus got talking upon their favorite themes she would put on her bonnet and be off for a walk and Cyrus would naturally follow without delay

She wasn't happy unless Cyrus was praising her dress or herself, unless there were young folks over from the other Numbers and from Wheatland for a frolic or they were going abroad to some merry making and when nobody was present but themselves she would amuse herself taking off the folks who spoke in the last revival meeting, showing how Elder Prosy at Wheatfield, conscious in the midst of a long prayer that the candles on the desk needed snuffing groped for them with his eyes shut, snuffed them out between his thumb and finger, and threw the red hot ends into a brother's new hat on the deacon's seat and wrung his hands at this foretaste of damnation then she would follow this episode with singing Coronation gutturally like Deacon Crocket, and nasally like old Mrs Quaver and related how Deacon Crocket always omitted blessing when they had pudding and milk for tea and Mrs Ferriston would look at Agnes over her spectacles and shake her head in protest but laugh in spite of herself But by and by my lady began to suggest improvements in the house, there might be a wing built out here, the roof might be raised the yard needed a new picket fence whoever heard of a house without a flower garden?

I thought we had one eh June?' said Cyrus

Where ignorance is bliss" returned Agnes 'Nobody has such old-fashioned things as marigolds, bachelors buttons, hollyhock and love lies bleeding in their gardens now a days everybody laughs at em'

I suppose the Lord made 'em," objected Mrs Ferriston and then Agnes openly confessed that she should die of the landscape papering on the best room which Mrs Ferriston had guarded from the flies for years as if it had been a gallery of paintings by the first masters and for her part, declared looking out at the window, she hated to see the fields about a house disfigured with vulgar looking pumpkins and cabbages After she went home Cyrus set to work quietly making some of the alterations she had suggested—for they were to be married in the spring—asking Jane's opinion and co-operation as if she had been a sister In the first place he built on the wing, and put another window in Jane's room

You'll be able to see to prink better Jennie said he [illegible] I thought it may be you'd rather have it out in the new wing? Take your choice For Jane's parents were dead and she had now been living year in and year out at The Numbers

I shan't want either one or the other thank you, she answered

Why not I should like to know ' Are you going to swing in the hammock among the trees

I am going to seek my fortune she laughed because she felt more like crying

Going away from here Jennie he cried dropping the hammer with which he had been driving nails 'Where are you going

'I don't know—somewhere

He paused a moment as if he was trying to understand her and perhaps his eyes were opened a crack then he picked up the hammer and resumed his work

I never thought of such a thing, Jane—between the blows There's no need of it At least, you'll stay till—till—spring!

Yes I will stay till Agnes comes, she answered

The winter set in early that season, and Cyrus went as usual into the woods logging leaving his mother with Jane for company and a boy to clear the paths and look after the stock Few but those who live there know what a winter in The Numbers is like, when the snow hedges you about week in and week out and a passing team is so rare as to bring the household from kitchen to attic to watch it out of sight and the wind whistles over miles of uninhabited country, with nothing to impede it when there is nothing to break the monotony of the long frosty days which the almanac says are short, but homely duties and the promise of seed time and harvest It seems then as if no sun were potent enough to melt the mountainous drifts, built as miraculously as the coral reefs and at midnight you wake up suddenly and hear the wolves howling in the woods close at hand and find their tracks about the sheep-pen the next morning, and remember with a shudder that there isn't an able-bodied man on the premises In such circumstances one needs to have vast resources in one's self to be in harmony with one's household and destiny

When Seth Price joined Cyrus camp, a week before Christmas he carried him a line from Agnes, saying that she should expect him down to watch the new year in and the old year out at the watch meeting, if he loved her Luther Smiley had offered to lay a wager that he wouldn't put himself out so much, and even Mrs Deacon Crocket had said it wasn't likely seeing he was sure of her, but she had set her heart upon showing how much he cared for her.

It isn't every lover who could resist such an appeal, and, though Cyrus didn't think it of the least consequence whether other people believed in his love or not so long as it was a reality to himself and Agnes, yet he was doubtless flattered by her earnest desire for his presence, and if it would please her, why not go? It did not occur to him that it was as much a vulgar wish to make a parade of his regard for her as a desire to see him It happened very luckily however Cyrus thought—and perhaps most people would agree with him—that the camp had run short of molasses, and one of the men was detailed to take a team and go to Wheatland for a supply—for what was coffee without molasses? He started on the last day of December and Cyrus with him, and he dropped Cyrus where the roads diverged one leading into Wheatland, and the other into The Numbers There was a matter of ten or twelve miles between Cyrus and the Price farm when he left the team but he had often walked further with a load of produce for market The distance didn't strike him as being of any consequence, he had all his life been used to mile stones It had begun to snow some time before gently, as if it meant no harm, and Cyrus was used to snow, too But presently the wind changed and blew rough, and tossed the flakes into his eyes, and the flakes themselves grew bigger and thicker, till they clogged his steps and blinded his sight and obliterated every landmark Still he trudged forward, cheering himself with the warm welcome before him assuring himself that the way was as familiar as his own potato field till by and by he began to wonder if he were not watching the old year out by himself, if he had not been longer on the road than the distance warranted, if he had not missed the way as it were not growing colder and darker every moment He knew about as well where he was as if he had traveled into Nova Zembla or had been cast away on an iceberg He paused and rested against the bole of a tree to collect his wits There was no use in proceeding further on the wrong road In coming to this decision he naturally sat down by the way to reflect which was the right one He did not reflect long Lovely images and colors floated before his mind's eye He had reached the farm, and there was a great back log blazing on the hearth for him, and brown eyes looking into his, and tender tones in his ears Then he came to himself with a start, and sat upright peering into the black night upon which the storm seemed an inscription in an unknown tongue, waked by the rending of some great limb on the tree above him, which had fallen and pinned him to the ground The dangers of his situation were too evident for conjecture He would be frozen stiff by cock crow even if he were not dead of the blow first Through the storm and darkness he called for help, without daring to hope for it, put all his waning strength and despair into a few imploring cries, and fell benumbed with pain with one leg crushed and broken It looked very much as if he would bear the old year company

Jane had sat up later than usual that night cutting a piece of stuff out of the loom, which she had finished weaving that afternoon Mrs Ferriston was fast asleep, and the farm boy had gone to the watch-meeting and as Jane raked up the coals on the hearth she wondered if Cyrus was holding watch with Agnes—who had boasted that she would bring him down from heaven if she wanted him—and if he would be coming home to kiss his mother in the early morning Then she went to the door to look out at the night which was not more lonely than she, to bid adieu to the old year, and was it the shriek of the wind or a human voice that smote her ears?—a voice that sounded strangely like his Oh, if it should be! If he were needing her! At least some body on that lonely waste was in trouble perhaps dying If she went to her safe warm bed and waited for daylight she might never be able to get that cry out of her ears! So she raked open the coals and piled on the logs, she set a lighted candle in the window, she put a flask of brandy in her pocket and a bunch of matches, took her lantern and pushed out into the storm with answering cries that help was near The wind slapped in her face and shrieked about her ears till she half misdoubted herself; but destiny led her to where Cyrus lay, not a quarter of a mile from home She was down on her knees beside him in the drift instantly rubbing him with the snow that sifted about him chafing his hands in her own soft palms, struggling with the imprisoning bough, letting the brandy trickle down his throat, warming him into life with her cheek against his, and calling to him with all the tenderness in her soul with all the endearing names that love invents for in that awful moment she had forgotten that he belonged to any one but herself Perhaps in the gradual reawakening he may have caught the meaning of this, but he gave no sign of it By frantic efforts, Jane succeeded in removing the limb that had fallen upon him and having pushed and dragged it to a safe distance she made a bonfire of it, which illumined the ghastly night fantastically, and kept the wolves at bay that were howling in the woods near It was only then she discovered that his leg was broken There was but one thing to do however; she provided him a counterpane of spruce boughs, as warm as wool gathered dry faggots in the edge of the woods and extended her blaze in a circle about the disabled man like an Indian watch fire then she hastened home and as his mother was too infirm to give assistance she yoked the steers into the drag—for old Dapple's slender legs could not flounder safely through the drifts—and urged them slowly across the untrodden snow, guided by the lantern, to the nearest neighbor five miles away, who willingly left his warm pillow, and with his son of fifteen plodded back on the drag to where the watch fires smoldered and Cyrus waited It was not long before Cyrus was safe in bed, with his mother and Jane administering to him, and neighbor Goodheart and the steers on the way for the doctor But it was many a long week before he left his bed indeed, the drifts had dissolved like magic and spring had woven her spells in blade and bud and the grass was long and ready for mowing before he took his first step into the air and then he leaned on Jane's arm and walked with a crutch The Numbers said he would always need to use a crutch unless he preferred a cork leg When the doctors from Wheatfield and beyond had decided upon amputation Cyrus had sent for Agnes Perhaps he had meant to give her her freedom with a lingering hope that she would reject it perhaps he craved the solace of her presence before his journey toward the Valley of Shadows Nobody ever knew it was only known that she refused to go to him! The people in The Numbers blamed or excused her according to their natures or predisposition She didn't promise herself to a cripple 'It's better to live unmatched than ill matched'

She's likely to go all the way through the woods and pick up a crooked stick at last.

It's a poor kind of love that's scared at misfortune were some of the current remarks passing from mouth to mouth

And so the year wore through and Cyrus could no longer go up the Aroostook lumbering nor swing his scythe in the meadow He had to hire a hand about the farm But while he sat at home with idle impatient hands inspiration came to him as he watched Jane [illegible] loom, at the wheel and he invented a spinning machine About this time old Mrs Ferriston slipped away out of life and one day Mrs Deacon Crocket rode over to engage Jane for her winter's weaving

You won't be needin' a housekeeper no longer I s'pose Cyrus said she and folks all is [illegible] so thinks I Jane had better come home with me for the weavin'

Jane he said—for Mrs Deacon Crocket used an ear trumpet and was no kind of hindrance to love making—Jane you promised to stay with me till Agnes came Will you keep your promise?

Yes Cyrus I will if you insist upon it she answered

Jane and I, he said speaking into Mrs Crocket's trumpet 'are going down to Wheatfield this afternoon to be married

Mrs Crocket took the Price farm on her way home for fear her news would spoil if kept over night

Cyrus Ferriston's going to be married'" she said and no thanks to you, Agnes Price Jane Hutton's a lucky gal

Do tell' cried Agnes Never saw a goose so gray but what could find its mate I always thought she had a hankerin after him I s'pose I shan't be asked to stand up with em What a figger they'll cut when they pair out together! I never could have borne to go limpin along with a man like that all my days—it didn't look genteel

But they do say, continued her comforter how he's made a power of money out of that machine of his n—it's just like spinning gold And they're talkin' about sendin' of him to the Legislature and then I s'pose Jane'll go too and help represent' —Harper's Weekly

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

FRIDAY EVENING July 10 1874

Gold in New York 110 [illegible]

Portland Legal Tenders buying 89½ selling 90½

Gold bars are quotable at 725@750 fine

Exchange on New York ½ per cent premium for currency and one per cent premium for gold

Exchange on San Francisco at ¾ of 1 percent premium

Wheat in Liverpool by mail advices from San Francisco 12s 3d@12s 6d for average California and 12s 6d@12s 10d for club

Considerable discussion is going on as to the practical effect of the new banking law upon the actual amount of currency in circulation It is claimed by the paper money men that Congress intended it for an inflation measure as it increases the legal tenders from $356 000 000 to $382 000 000 On the other hand it is claimed as a measure of contraction for the reason that the Department has all along claimed the power to issue legal tenders up to $400 000 000 This bill at once strikes off $18 000 000 of what the Department calls a reserve Section six says

That the amount of United States notes outstanding and to be issued as a part of the circulating medium shall not exceed the sum of $382 000 000 which said sum shall appear in each monthly statement of the public debt and no part thereof shall be held or used as a reserve.

It will thus be seen that the reserve is abolished yet it must not be understood that the Treasury is restricted as to the amount of the balance, that may be kept for if such should be the correct interpretation of section six the Treasury would not be permitted to hold a single dollar Clearly the bill leaves the amount of the balance to be retained in the Treasury to the discretion of the Chief of that Department Therefore since it has been always claimed by the President and by the former Secretaries—Boutwell and Richardson—that a large reserve was necessary for the safe and easy working of the Department it is reasonable to expect with the $18 000 000 stricken out of existence and no longer a fund subject to draft for contingencies the Department will henceforth be compelled to keep in hand a balance instead of a reserve

This Year's Crops

The beginning of the heated term is now upon us and though the weather is not pleasant just when the mercury is up to 80° in the shade the present warm spell will doubtless be gladly welcomed by the farmers as it places beyond all probability any failure in crops of almost everything which the soil of Oregon produces and insures a heavy yield of most At a low estimate Oregon will have for export this year 1 250 000 bushels of wheat 1 000 000 bushels of oats 100 000 bushels barley 2 000 000 pounds of wool 100 000 boxes of apples besides a thousand other things in large quantities too tedious to mention but all of which will go to bring money into the country and give our State a new impetus in the march of prosperity and wealth With a few more days of such weather as we now have and in every valley and on every hillside in our fair State the golden fields will invite the husbandman to reap the reward of his toil While prices do not promise as high as we might wish, millions of dollars will be paid out for the products of our State this year—five millions at least, which will be $50 to each inhabitant What State of our age can do better
